

OUT-DOOR CLUBS OF CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES.

OUTING has spared no pains nor expense in endeavoring to put itself on friendly terms of acquaintance with every club or organization throughout the length and breadth of the land, that assembles for the purpose of supporting and enjoying some branch of healthy and manly out-door recreation and sport. It feels it a solemn duty, as the highest authority on all matters appertaining to the scientific development and encouragement of physical culture and amusement, to call upon all those interested in the furtherance and completion of the noble work it has undertaken, to aid and enlarge its sphere of labor and usefulness by sending to its office such information as will tend to make its pages full, entire and trustworthy. To its able staff of specialists in every department of games and pastimes can safely be intrusted any controversy, debatable point, or knotty technical difficulty arising in any field of recreation, feeling confident that the ruling of OUTING may be relied on as final and authoritative.

OUTING presents the widest field for the interchange of the friendly relations that ought to exist between clubs devoted to the same sport; and in order that every Spoke of the Wheel of Sport should fit into the Hub, and be bound firmly together by the bright tires of its literature, it is very much to be desired that club presidents, secretaries, or other persons in authority, should send the latest information relative to the working of his club and be incorporated in OUTING's List.

In order that the list which we now append may be further enlarged, we enumerate the different sports we cover: Archery, Athletics, Base-Ball, Bicycling, Boating, Canoeing, Coaching, Cricket, Croquet, Curling, Fishing, Ice Yachting, Lacrosse, Lawn Tennis, Polo, Racquet, Rifle, Rod and Gun, Rowing, Snow-Shoeing, Swimming, Tobogganing, Yachting.

A GREAT WALKING CLUB.

THE objects of the Appalachian Mountain Club, as stated in its constitution, are: "To bring together all those interested in mountains; to make the mountain resorts more attractive by building camps, opening paths, etc.; to collect all available information about the mountains which is published in magazine articles, in 'Appalachia,' or in the form of maps, and incidentally to furnish pleasure and profit to the members."

To these aims should be added another, which each year is becoming more prominent: that is, the training of both men and women to climb and to walk easily distances of a considerable number of miles at a stretch—an accomplishment that the Americans, especially American women, rarely possess.

As an illustration of the success of the club in carrying out its aims, a brief record of this summer's work may be of interest. In July a party numbering over 100 spent an entire week at the Summit House, on Mount Washington. The weather was exceptionally favorable, every day being sunny and warm, so that the plans were carried out without a break.

The entire range from Mount Clinton to Mount Madison was visited, the great ravines which penetrate the sides explored and traversed; Tuckerman's, where the Snow Arch is situated, with the lovely Hermit Lake half a mile below it; Huntingdon's, a wilder ravine rarely visited; the great Gulf, sometimes called the Gulf of Mexico, Ravine of Castles, Oake's Gulf, and the remote Gulf of Slides, beyond Boot's Spur.

There were several noted botanists present, and the dainty Alpine flora was studied under the most favorable circumstances, viz., in its home; and many rare plants were gathered, and a club herbarium of mountain plants was planned and begun.

About two-thirds of the members present were ladies, and they showed equal endurance and enthusiasm on the walks with the men.

Sixty-six of the 100 walked from the Summit down the Bridle Path to Mount Pleasant and back the first day. Fifty went to the Snow Arch in Tuckerman's Ravine, more than fifty over the east northern peaks to Jefferson, Adams and Madison, and equal numbers on the other trips. In connection with the excursion a new and easy path was made up the side of Mount Pleasant, joining the Crawford Path on the summit, thus providing a new approach for pedestrians to Mount Washington from the Fabryan side of the range, and the old unused Davis Bridle Path was traversed to Upper Bartlett, a distance of a dozen miles. Nearly eve path leading to the great range was used and inspected during the week. During the summer, various members have climbed over the Carter and Twin mountain ranges, and have explored the Wild River and Pilot Mountain regions. Old camps have been repaired, new ones built, record bottles placed on some summits. A new path has been cut from Shelburne, N. H., to Mount Baldface, and preliminary prints of a proposed map of the White Mountains have been tested and corrected.

In early September a party of fifty visited the Adirondacks and spent a week in camp. Another small party, private, yet composed of club members, explored and visited Mount Katahdin, in Maine, while many individual members in various parts of New Hampshire and Maine have made ascents and explorations, collecting much valuable geographical and scientific information, eventually to be reported to the club.

Another project of the club, tried this year for the first time, has met with unqualified success and approval, and bids fair to become one of the most valuable portions of the work of the club. It is the conducting each Saturday a walk of from four to eight or ten miles to various points of interest in the vicinity of Boston, where the club has its headquarters. They should claim the interest of readers of this magazine from the name of "Outings," which has been given them.

In order to induce similar enterprises in other cities and towns, we give a few of the arguments and details of these delightful day trips.

It was said that during the summer, many members were at liberty Saturday afternoon; that some would doubtless like to take a walk, but not having a companion or a definite place to visit, did not go; that those who could not join the long excursions of the club could thus become acquainted with their fellow-members, and that many, especially ladies, who could not climb mountains, could without fatigue take these short walks, and get both health and increased strength, and perchance become stirred with the "divine afflatus" of walking and mountaineering, and that thus, in a small way, might be sown the seeds that should some time bear fruit in making the American the full equal of his English cousin in endurance, grace and ease in walking; for "once a mountaineer, always a mountaineer."

The results proved the accuracy of the judgment of the plans. The first outing was expected to attract a dozen or fifteen members, but the leaders were amazed to find over forty at the train, and the numbers have varied from forty to eighty, reaching 140 on a trip to Mount Wachusett, an all-day trip; and even when the weather was forbidding, the number has rarely if ever fallen below twenty-five. The outings have thus proved themselves an indispensable and valued part of the work of the club, and will doubtless be continued the next season. They were begun in April, and with the omission of a few weeks in the hottest part of July and August, were continued until Thanksgiving.

In conclusion, a few points in regard to the manner of conducting the outings will be of value. It should be stated that the members sustain the outings by volunteering to conduct the walks on different Saturdays, which offers are used by the Committee on Outings, whenever most convenient.

On each Thursday evening a notice is printed in an evening paper announced by a circular to the members at the beginning of the season, in which circular a full explanation is given of the methods proposed and of the meaning of the abbreviations used in the notice. As the notice is to members only, the notice is made in a form that shall not attract public attention more than may be necessary. The following is a copy:

A. M. C. NOTICE TO MEMBERS.

Bellevue Hill, Saturday, September 11. B. & P. R. R., 2.10 P.M., for Clarendon Hills Station. Four miles. Return, Boston, 6.15. Mr. Smith.

The above tells the entire distance to be walked, in the round trip, and the name of the leader for the day. The leader has usually been over the ground previously, and therefore knows the way, but no arrangements are made for fares, etc., the desire being to make the walks informal, and place no heavy burden of responsibility upon the leader. Places are selected which may be reached by a ride of a half-hour or less in the cars (sometimes the walk is from the city itself), and the fares are so low that the item is an unimportant one. The return ride in the cars is made sometimes from another station on a different railroad, in which case the newspaper notice indicates the fact. Members who live in the suburbs frequently join or leave the party at their nearest stations. The desired aim seems to have been attained of providing a pleasant walk to a good view point, without making the labor of preparing the trip such a burden that it will deter members from being willing to conduct the outings. At the risk of wearying our readers we have tried to explain fully the details of this new plan, which has proved so successful for the Appalachian Club, in the hope that similar walking parties may be undertaken the coming summer by our readers and their friends.

OUTING'S VOYAGE BEGUN.

(From the Morning News of Savannah, Georgia, November 29, 1886.)

CAPTAIN CLOUDMAN STARTS AROUND THE WORLD.

Crowds Witness the Departure of the Little Vessel—St. Augustine Creek too much for the Navigator who is to Circle the Globe—Outing Goes Ashore in the Creek and Waits for the Tide—The Reception at the Thunderbolt Club House Postponed.

"ALL ready, there forward? Up with the jib! Wheel hard to starboard."

The orders were followed by a rattling of lines as the ropes slipped through the blocks and the canvas was hoisted. A faint puff of wind filled out the jib, the mainsail jibed and the sloop yacht Outing swung around gracefully on her keel and headed down the river on the starboard tack. The national colors floated from her topmast, and a small burgee flapped lightly from the gaff peak.

Ten minutes before, the clock in the Exchange, just opposite which the yacht had been lying, struck one. The tide had been running down for two hours, and Captain Cloudman had been impatiently waiting that long for two canoes to turn the bend in the river above where he was lying.

CROWDS WATCH THE START.

All the morning the Outing had been overrun with visitors, who came off from the Exchange dock in small boats. The wharves were lined with a crowd, assembled to see the less than five-ton yacht that was to start on a voyage around the globe. The scene recalled the woodcuts in the old histories, of the crowd that gathered on the pier in Palos a little less than 400 years ago, to see the Santa Maria and her two consorts start out on their long voyage. Becoming tired of waiting, the crowd dwindled away before the order was given to raise the Outing's bow anchor. When Dr. Neide, late secretary of the American Canoe Association, and Capt. Ed. Andrews, of the Philadelphia Canoe Club, did come, they slipped lightly by and got a good lead of the sloop. Hardly had the Outing got fairly started before the breeze died away. The limp colors were dipped thrice as a farewell salute.

THE PARTY ON THE "OUTING."

On board the yacht were Capt. F. A. Cloudman, his father, Mr. A. F. Cloudman, a representative of the Morning News, and a crew of two. For the first mile or two, the little fleet did scarcely more than drift down with the tide, as the wind came only in light puffs. After Fort Oglethorpe was passed a slight breeze sprang up and the party made better progress. As her sheets filled, the Outing showed that she was no laggard, for she skimmed along and passed the canoes in a jiffy. From that time on she kept the lead easily. There was no breeze to give her a good teat, but she worked into the wind, which shifted around to the south-east admirably. It was seen that her bow was down too deep, and that she did not have enough ballast aft and amidships.

THROUGH ST. AUGUSTINE CREEK.

In St. Augustine creek it was first a long leg and then a short one. She obeyed her rudder quickly and went about capittally.

Those who were not engaged in handling the boat amused themselves by popping pistols at ducks' heads and corks from the too of the cabin. All went merrily and well, though a little slower than was wished, until the boats got down within half a mile of Runaway-Nigger's creek. St. Augustine creek is narrow there, and the longest stretches that could be made were only a hundred yards or so. In some places the east bank runs out pretty well, and boats have to keep near the west bank, and in other places it is the reverse. Just as the sloop had made one of the long stretches and was going about on the port tack the wind left her.

STUCK IN THE MUD.

She had been run in close so as to make every inch on the tack she was on, and when the puff was spent her sails failed to jibe, and her bow stuck in the soft, oozy marsh mud. Oars were nut over. but the bottom offered no more resistance than the water. The jib was hauled down in a twinkling and the crew jumped in the small boat, and tried to pull the yacht's stem around so that the tide would cut her off the bank, but it was no good. The small anchor was then carried out over the stem, and those on board tried to pull themselves out into the channel. They would probably have succeeded had there been anything for the flukes to hold to. As it was the anchor was pulled through the mud and the boat was not budged.

TRYING TO GET OFF.

A suggestion was made that some one should jump overboard and push, but the bottom was considered rather too yielding. The two canoeists passed, and there was not wind enough for them to stem the tide and come back. It was then four o'clock, and the tide was at three-quarters ebb. The Outing was drawing three feet and was pretty tight in the mud. Every minute left her in a worse fix, and all hands came to the conclusion very shortly that there was nothing to do but wait for high water, which was between seven and eight hours off. "All hands" did not in that instance include the News man, whom the prospect did not strike as particularly cheerful. Capt. Cloudman's proffer of his small boat and crew was accepted, and an hour's rowing landed the reporter at the club house of the Savannah Yacht Club.

AT THE YACHT CLUB HOUSE.

Commodore Wm. Hone, Vice-Commodore J. N. Johnson, and quite a number of members were on the club's wharf, looking out for the Outing, which was stuck six miles away.

Captain Andrews and Dr. Neide anchored near the Outing, and said they would wait until she could get off, which Captain Cloudman expected to do before midnight. He will probably be at Thunderbolt this forenoon, and at high water the three boats will start again. The two canoeists expect to spend the winter in Florida waters.

Captain Cloudman's father may accompany him to San Francisco. The captain says that two magazines have attempted to smuggle a correspondent on board in the guise of a seaman, but he will not take any one except his

THE TOMB OF IZAAK WALTON.

To the Editor of OUTING:—When in Worcester (Eng.) our party spent some hours in its magnificent cathedral, a grand old structure, in the form of a double cross, and having a central tower nearly two hundred feet in height.

A great hush fell upon us all, as moving reverently, we thought of the countless multitude now sleeping, and whose names and virtues have been inscribed by loving hands.

More than most, an epitaph written by Izaak Walton to the memory of ha wife interested us, and carefully spelling out the quaintly-outlined words, which, for sweetness and pathos, can hardly be excelled, it was as if Izaak himself might be telling over again the story of his love an of his loss.

"Here lyeth buried so much,
as could dye of Anne, the wife of Izaak Walton—who was a woman of remarkable prudence
and of the primitive piety.
Her
great and general knowledge being adorned with such great humility, and this, with so much meekness as made her
Worthy of a more—¹
Monument.
She dyed—(alas that she so dyed.)
Study to be like her."

¹ Here a word was undistinguishable; it doubtless was "enduring." The arrangement of the words is an exact copy of the note received.
