CALIFORNIA LEAGUE.

HOPEFUL HANLON

SAYS HE WILL HAVE THE GOODS NEXT SEASON.

The Brooklyn Club Will be in the Race Next Season With a Strong Team —Hanlon Also Has His Own Views on the Situation at Large.

Special to Sporting Life.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 9.—Before leaving for New York to attend the National League meeting, Manager Hanlon, of the Brooklyn, was interviewed. He said he expected much general business would be transacted by the League, that he hoped Temple would accept a tender of the League presidency, and that he knew of no proposed changes in the playing rules. He also expressed himself as still in favor of a return to the twelve-club system. He felt sure that the American League had not secured a ground in Manhattan Island, and was convinced also that McGraw had captured Delehanty; in fact, he knew that weeks ago. Regarding Brooklyn prospects, Manager Hanlon declared he would have a strong team next season. Said he: "I have already signed six pitchers, three catchers and a strong infield. Two stalwart outfielders have been secured, and I expect to sign another in a few days. With the exception of two or three utility men, whom I expect to land shortly, the Brooklyn team of 1903 is complete."

BROOKLYN BULLETIN.

Still in Doubt as to Keeler's Intentions—More Money Surely Needed to Hold the Famous Player in Line—How the New York Situation Appears to Brooklyn.

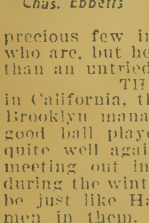
By John B. Foster.

Brooklyn, N. Y., December 9.—Editor "Sporting Life:"—From out in California we hear that "Billy" Keeler has announced that he has left the Brooklyn Club for the American League Club that is having such a hard time to get located in New York. The reasons alleged are that he gets more money and still is able to play at home. Some people are inclined to believe that the report is true, and others still cling to the belief that arrangements will be made by which Keeler will be kept with Brooklyn another year. The club officials say they have heard nothing from Keeler. Hanlon stick to it that the outfielder promised to let him know when the chance came to do business and believes that Keeler will stand by his word. It is a fact, however, that the Brooklyn Club will have to come up in its price to Keeler to keep him. The youngster has been offered a great deal of money, more than he or any other ball player is worth, and he is not going to remain in Brooklyn and lose it when there is an opportunity to secure it elsewhere.

William Keeler

PRUDENT MANAGEMENT.

There is not a disposition in Brooklyn to meet the fancy prices that rule in other cities. On the whole the Brooklyn management, to a certain extent, is wise. The base ball bubble will break inside of the next two years in any event, and a management that can go through the present nonsense and get a little run for the money it is bound to lose shows discretion. At the same time, it is not policy to permit a player of Keeler's calibre to get away. If it takes a little money to hold him put a little out. He is not worth $10,000 a year salary, by a long shot, and there are precious few in the ball playing business who are, but he is worth a great deal more than an untried experiment.



Chas. Ebbetts

THE YOUNGSTERS

in California, that have been signed by the Brooklyn management, appear to be very good ball players and holding their own quite well against all the talent they are meeting out in that part of the country during the winter playing season. It would be just like Hanlon to pick up two good men in them. In fact, nothing but fair ball players do come from California as a rule. The slope seems particularly suited to the development of that species of humanity.

MANHATTAN FIELD.

The story that the National League would be forced to give up Manhattan Field to the American League at the peril of having a street cut through the Polo Grounds gets revived every twenty-four hours by two or three persons who still seem to think that they are fighting the National League. As remarked before it wouldn't be such bad policy for the National League to give the American League Manhattan Field and let them go it, but it is not probable such a thing will happen in view of the fact that the National League has retained control of the property so long without deriving any advantage from it. It would not be the least surprising if some day a magnificent structure would go up on Manhattan Field, making it the most conspicuous outdoor pleasure ground in the world, but that will entail the expenditure of a large sum of money and is not likely to take place until base ball is in a more settled state than it is at present.

BROOKLYN SENTIMENT.

There is a growing sentiment over here in Brooklyn that the National League will have a good season next year in New York. McGraw has proved himself to be pretty popular and level headed youngster with the men who made base ball a success in the big city, and it is likely that his influence will be felt not a little. Of course the New Yorks will have to play good ball to hold the crowds, but they are likely to do that and the crowd will go with them to the Polo Grounds. No matter what any one says to the contrary it is the easiest place of access in New York for an athletic field. Of course if a ball ground could be placed in Madison Square it probably would appeal to a few more hundreds who are engaged in downtown occupations, but so long as one cannot be put there.

THE POLO GROUND

answers the purpose handily. All the West side traffi centres on the elevated railroad and the stations are handy and convenient to the below Fourteenth street district. Let the New York club play any kind of ball next year and you will find the special express trains to the Polo Grounds making trips as they did years ago, loaded to the guards with brokers and merchants out to gratify their love for the sport. Brooklyn is interested in it for the chances are two to one that we shall have a little more deadly rivalry between the boroughs, although the Brooklyn management will be getting the short end if they do not have a team that can compete with the reconstructed Giants.

THE LEAGUE PRESIDENCY.

The Brooklyn management declines to say much about the question of a president for the National League next year. It wouldn't be very surprising if matters went on in the same old way. The name of Mr. Temple has been mentioned for the presidency, but it is believed that Mr. Temple will not change his residence to New York and there is a sentiment on the part of the owners of the National League that the head of the organization should be in Manhattan while the present fight is going on. His presence might be needed once in awhile.

DUNLAP DEAD.

The Once Famous Star Second Baseman Ends His Days After Years of Gloom and Poverty in a Hospital.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 4.—Fred Dunlap, one of the stars of the diamond, was buried yesterday. He died on December 1 at the Philadelphia Hospital of consumption of the bowels, and his many friends took care of his body and had it interred in Odd Fellows' Cemetery. The funeral was held from the office of Undertaker Oliver H. Bair. Quite a number of old ball player's friends attended and accompanied the remains to the cemetery. Dunlap was 43 years old.

(Fred Dunlap was in the '80s one of the great players of the National League, sharing with Fred Pfeffer the honor of being the star second baseman of the profession. Dunlap was born in Philadelphia 43 years ago and graduated from the downtown lots. He first came into prominence as a professional with the Albany Club. For four years he was the star of the Cleveland National League team. In 1884 he jumped the Cleveland Club's reserve to play with Henry Lucas' St. Louis Club, of the Union Association. After two years in St. Louis Dunlap played with the Detroit, Pittsburg and Washington teams. He dropped out of the game in 1892 to follow the racing game, at which he lost the respectable fortune he accumulated in base ball, as he was always a high-salaried star ball player. The last two years of his life were spent in abject poverty and mental gloom.—Editor Sporting Life.)

PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEWS.

Manager Jack Flannery, of the Helena Club, is now in the East, hustling for new talent.

Manager Vigneux, of Portland, has signed pitcher Grant Thacher, of last season's Tacoma team.

It is likely that Harry Youngman, of Homestead, Pa., late of the Dayton Club, will be Tacoma's new manager, succeeding Jay Andrews. The club is done with playing managers.

The Spokane Club has changed hands, Harry Green and Charles Hollenbrand selling their stock to W. V. Garrett. Third baseman Jay Andrews, late of Tacoma, succeeds Jack Grim as manager.

How They Stand.

The standing of the clubs up to and including games of December 5, follows:
