NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Neal Garnham is a Senior Research Fellow at the Academy for Irish Cultural Heritages at the University of Ulster, Magee Campus, Londonderry. Neal's article on 'The Roles of Cricket in Victorian and Edwardian Ireland' is his first contribution to Sporting Traditions.

Russell Hoye is a Lecturer in the School of Leisure Studies at Griffith University, Brisbane, where his main teaching interests are sport management and organisational behaviour. Russell’s research interests focus on the governance and performance of Australia's non-profit and sporting organisations. He has become a committed Brisbane Lions fan since migrating north from football’s heartland.

Clare Simpson is a Senior Lecturer in the Environment, Society and Design Division at Lincoln University. Clare's current sports history research focuses primarily on the social history of cycling. Having recently collaborated on a coffee-table book on New Zealand cycling history, Clare hopes to use this work to delve deeper into the subject, exploring themes such as touring, commerce and industry, racing, clubs and, of course, the bicycles themselves, www.lincoln.ac.nz/esdd/profiles/simpson.htm

CONFERENCE 2005

sportingtraditions XV

Details relating to 'Sporting Traditions XV', the biennial conference of ASSH, hosted by Victoria University and scheduled to be held in Melbourne in July 2005, will be posted on the ASSH website soon. Initial queries or offers of sponsorship should be directed to the interim convenor, Rob Hess.